Son of Uwe Krupp, born in US, played with USNTDP... purely a defensive defender... Pro size and skating ability, should continue to get bigger... eluded forecheckers well when retrieving puck behind net and-or corner after dump ins, smart, quick movements - sometimes had to as a result of bobbling the puck... played lanes and angles well to rub out guys into the boards as they'd rush the zone up the wing... not played on the PK or PP, but caught the tail end of a PP shift.. laid some solid hits... -1 on the night... counted 16 shifts (7-3-6), not being on special teams kept him on bench... would have bigger role on weaker team.

Seems to only leave the ice to rest. Must have played over 25 mins in 7-4 loss. Rushed puck several times, very well, end to end. Gets respect from opponents at this level - getting cocky. Has no intention to pass once he takes off - like a running back, he goes til hes stopped... looks good, team leader... but will learn lessons hard in pro if he continues to rush without looking for teammates. ... active teammate/leader during pre-game skate, having fun...

Huge overage UFA... Slow , not intense on backcheck... big man in front on 2nd PP unit... was on for PPG for... on for 5on5 against and one goal for... big guy stands in front but doesnt battle... at 6'4 232 was knocked off puck by smaller players several times... rarely moving his feet, so often not where he should be when he should be there... could be much more physical... had lots of time to release shot of LW rush, had blocked and over glass after he took forever to release... ran down small guys by accident without looking (W. Wallen), but cant seem to do it when he should... 15 shifts (6/5/4 by period), coach didnt put him out in last 7 mins of game (after a minus)-cant blame the coach... no hustle or edge here tonight.

was on for SHG for, but 2 PPG against (including a 4 on 3 PPGA), +3 on the night... despite size issues, still not a weakness due to strong positional play (as long as strength level keeps growing)... had constant battle with Tangradi all night, frustrating him enough to draw him into a foolish penalty out of frustration in 3rd... Flemming had already won the battle before that incident... great in transition, St. Mike`s would be lost without their main cog...out in all situations... trying to use shot more - shot is weak, but he makes sure to put it low and on net, wrister or slap... if he sees a time to jump up into play or drive net (had rush from ctr ice in 1st), he takes it (never seen him burned on it defensively yet)... snuck from point to lip of right side of crease... when his goalie was out of position, he went post to post himself and stopped a wraparound attempt from being jammed in.... rode a few guys into the boards, notably Tangradi several times. shifts - 28 (9-9-10) 9 PK shifts... takes long shiftsIm more impressed by him every game - especially against the top player on the top line of the top team in the conference tonight. He may appear small-ish, but his defensive abilities are sound, and always will be if he maxes out his 5`11 frame... like Zubov meets Brian Campbell... a RH shooting D-man, PP QB. If he slips out of the top 100, he`ll be a steal.

Scored on breakaway on nice move (5 hole on backhand deke) - but move up ice anticipating giveaway by opposition and quick transition pass by his Dman even better - puck hit his stickinches over the blueline as he followed step, slipping right behind defender slightly to go in cleanly (was also the GWG)... generally responsible in all zones, Jordan Mayer was moved onto his right wing for this game... good offensively and defensively, projects as solid 3rd liner and penalty killer... smart, responsible, reliable, leadership skills, not elite at anything in particular but solid in all areas... could be flashier if he wasnt so solid and responsible... would maybe be a higher scoring junior if he wasnt paying such diligent attention to the details usually refined in the AHL.

shifty, small, swede import rookie... scored 2 goals in the 3rd period... took notably short shifts - stamina issues as a result of brain-bloodclot tragedy he made it through maybe... before the 3rd, i wondered if he'd be on the ice long enough to even see what he could do... had 14 shifts, with far more in 3rd after his first goal, he rode wave of confidence to score another quickly... shifts by period 4-4-6, had a bit of PP time... lined up at a few forward positions... small, but tries hard- got run down by 6`4 230 B.Mashinter when Mash wasnt even looking... 3rd period dangle goal (drove down RW side, made d-man look silly at top of circle, fired nice snapshot thru goalie) dropped every jaw in the arena... was chosen to serve bench minor in 2nd (not looked to for PK)... looks unsure of how high or low to play when watching his point man, but is attentive to it... covered point when Flemming rushed net- then abandoned it for some reason - only time ive ever seen Flemming get caught on a pinch, but was because he FIRST saw Wallen go cover, then apparently opt-out`... had about 6 Shots on goal, mainly in 3rd... seemed to turn it up with more ice time and a confidence boost - progression throughout game was noticeable... still sometimes doesnt take all passes cleanly, but looks to have moves and finish... not strong defensively yet, but paying attention...

Notes

watched pre-game skate... watched Krupp, Mashinter, Flemming and Wallen in detail, tired to watch Pelech, Cizikas, Subban, and Mayer casually.

was moved to RW for todays game, centred by Cizikas... doesnt take passes clean (still working on taking pass while keeping head up maybe)... had one assist... always seems to collect points despite severe lack of size and strength... did knock the much bigger Brandon Mashinter (6`4, 230) off the puck and steal at one point... plus 2 on the night

Watched casually, made easy by the fact he stuck out so much... been wanting to watch in detail, will soon, just so many players to watch in this game.

pure hustle, lots of energy, one of the junior players with the most edge ive seen recently... scored SHG in 1st - goalie charged out for loose incoming puck in high slot, with Pelech first on it with a defender draped on him. as all 3 collided, Pelech came out with the puck on the back of the goalie, and skated it into the empty net off the right side... one of the more frequent hitters on the team, solid if not elite in all areas... want to watch more closely.
