SUMMARY

Spaeth is a underrated player who showed gradual improvement over his college career. After making freshman season, became a integral part of the Golden Gophers' offense. Excelled as a blocker with his while also emerging as a dependable receiver. Has good hands and the ability to use his frame as a shield.

Runs decent routes, though he will struggle with his lack of initial quickness and burst. Can be a invite intermediate receiver, due to lack of downfield speed. A solid, smart, dependable player who can be a asset to determine his ultimate value...possible first day pick, but 4th round sounds more
